

"including perspectives from farmers, ranchers and processors as well as hunger, nutrition, conservation and rural development groups."

You've certainly gotten off on the wrong foot by not even including a single mention of the 900,000+ farmworkers who make it all possible. There is no farmer, nor consumer, without the farmworker to provide the labor to plant, weed, thin, harvest, prune, etc, the crops. Are you even interested in hearing THEIR voices?

Peace,

Michael
