

September 27, 2018

Dear livestock drug retailer,

On August 16, 2018, the California Department of Food and Agriculture's (CDFA) Antimicrobial Use and Stewardship program published final regulations with the Secretary of State's Office clarifying retailer requirements to sell restricted livestock drugs, including California prescription drugs. A copy of the final regulations has been included for your reference.

Certain antimicrobial restricted livestock drugs changed status on January 1, 2018 to require a prescription for purchase and use in California. Pursuant to the new regulations, these products are now defined as California prescription drugs. To sell California prescription drugs, you must have:

- A Pharmacy License or Veterinary Food-Animal Drug Retailer License issued by the California Board of Pharmacy, or
- A Restricted Livestock Drug (RLD) Retailer License issued by CDFA and adhere to additional requirements.

The additional requirements for selling California prescription drugs as a CDFA Restricted Livestock Drug Licensed Retailer include employing or contracting with a pharmacist, employing at least one livestock drug qualified individual, and enhanced recordkeeping. The enclosed documents include additional information regarding these requirements. CDFA staff will begin visiting retailers in the coming weeks to provide additional guidance and answer questions.

Information about these changes is available on the Antimicrobial Use and Stewardship website https://www.cdfa.ca.gov/ahfss/AUS/ and the Livestock Drug Program website https://www.cdfa.ca.gov/is/ffldrs/LivestockDrug.html. For questions, please email aus_regulations@cdfa.ca.gov or call 916-900-5022.

Sincerely,
