A statewide survey for the cotton pest Oxycarenus hyalinipennis, also known as the cotton seed bug (CSB) is currently underway. The survey includes visual inspection as well as sampling of a small number of bolls at 10% of the cotton acreage in each cotton growing county in California.

The survey began on September 1, 2021. Thirty-three (33) field surveys have been completed. Survey will continue in the Central and Northern California the week of September 13. Tulare and Kern counties are complete.

All boll samples will be inspected by the California Department of Food and Agriculture.
