

Veterinary Feed Directive Orders

VFD Order

- » A Veterinary Feed Directive (VFD) order is a written statement issued by a licensed veterinarian that authorizes the use of a VFD drug(s) in or on an animal feed.
- » A VFD order can only be issued if the livestock producer and veterinarian have a current Veterinarian-Client-Patient-Relationship (VCPR) and may be valid for up to six months.
- » A VFD order is written to treat specified diseases for an approximate number of animals and their specific species and production class.
- » The Food and Agriculture Code (FAC) Section 14406 allows the California Department of Agriculture (CDFA) to collect VFD orders from livestock owners, veterinarians and/or feed distributors.

Fill Completely

Once a VFD order is filled, it cannot be refilled.* A new VFD order must be written by the licensed veterinarian if additional treatment is needed.

Fill Partially

A VFD order can be partially filled for various reasons. For example, a smaller number of animals need the VFD feed (Only allowable change to VFD).

Not Filled

A VFD order may not be filled due to animals not needing the VFD medicated feed or the VFD expiring before being filled.

The VFD order is valid for a maximum of six months (unless otherwise specified in the order) and/or until it has been completely filled.

*Receiving or picking up multiple deliveries of VFD medicated feed does not constitute a refill if it is within the allowed timeframe of the VFD order and within the allowed feeding duration specified on the VFD order.

» Filling a VFD Order

A livestock producer can choose to get their VFD order filled from a feed manufacturer or a retail store that is on the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) VFD Distributor Notification List*, in either bulk or bagged form. All facilities on the FDA VFD list in California are subject to inspection by CDFA including the collection of VFD order and sales information.
